JOHN DILLINGER SHOOTS HIS WAY TO FREEDOM ONCE AGAIN

ROOSEVELT RUSHES ANTI-CRIME ACTION; OUTLAW GANG LOST

Report Of Second Skirmish Heard With Bandit Car Said To Have Been in Milwaukee; Federal Men Told To "Shoot Then Yell Hail" As Outlaws Make Getaway; Best Gunners In Federal Force Sent to Chicago Area.

By International News Service

President Roosevelt threw the weight of his supreme authority into the nation's new attempt to stem the bloody career of John Dillinger today by asking Congress to rush enactment of a series of anti-crime bills drafted by the department of justice.

The president's own concern over the unbridled violence of America's most notorious desperado, which yesterday took an additional toll of two lives, was reflected in orders to the department of justice agents to "shoot first and yell hail afterward."

Almost 1,000 officers of the law spread a dragnet over a wide territory from the forest lakeland of northern Wisconsin

COLUMBUS TO PAY $5,625 DAMAGE

Thirteen Suits of Property Owners Along Scioto River Compromised

COLUMBUS, April 24.—Thirteen damage suits seeking $82,500 from this city for damages to property as a result of pollution of the Scioto river has been settled in Judge Cecil J. Randall's court today, for $5,625.

Twenty-nine suits have now been settled by the city with 57 actions still pending.

Settlements were: Melvin M. and Thelma A. Sherman, Shadyside, $500; George W. Clark, Shadyside, $250; Chase Miller, Shadyside, $400; William D. and Nancy Athey, Shadyside, $250; Marie W. Peters, 1250 Fair Ave., $700; Homer H. Peters, 1250 Fair-ave and Margaret A. Dunlap, Williamsport, $300; Lewis W. Morehead, 1887 N. Fourth-st., $200; Lillie B. Morehead, 1887 N. Fourth-st., $200; Jacob C. Borer, 1025 S. High-st $1500; Elmer Upmeyer, Lockbourne, R. F. D., $600; E. Jennie Sherman, Shadyside, $250, and George Weigand, Lockbourne, R.F.D. $375.

Although the occupation of Dillinger and his bank-robbing pals, or efforts to apprehend them, have cost the lives of 13 persons the sum total, authenticated reward on the head of the notorious outlaw was $25,000. This was admitted today by the officials at the Indiana state house.

This plan money on the head of the nation's arch criminal was posted not because he was a killer but because he solicited a parole.

Waukesha counties today when police received a report that four men, all heavily armed, sped westward through Milwaukee in a large touring car.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—A corps of quick-on-the-trigger sharpshooters has been dispatched from the Philadelphia office in the department of justice division of investigation to northern Wisconsin to aid in the hunt for John Dillinger, fugitive desperado.

TOOK BEST GUNNERS This was revealed today by R. George Harvey, chief of the local division and formerly acting in charge of the Chicago bureau.

"They picked my best machine gunners," Harvey said. "The men they chose have been practicing with the rifle, pistol and machine gun, as has every agent in this office for nearly a year."

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 24.—John Dillinger and his band of outlaw killers, having eluded capture in two gun battles with authorities, today were believed to have slipped through the ranks of searching posses extending from the forest lakeland of northern Wisconsin to central Minnesota.

America's ace desperado and his followers were thought to have sped to a hide-out either in St. Paul or Chicago. Officers also expressed the theory that the gang had escaped to a north woods sanctuary.

Eight hundred law enforcement officers, numbering among them two dozen department of justice operatives, were waging one of the greatest manhunts this territory has ever known.

MUST "SHOOT FIRST" All were under orders to "shoot first" should Dillinger or his followers be encountered.

Preempting the drastic orders by suing to searching posses was the trail of death left by machine guns and pistols of the desperado band. Breaking through a group of officers surrounding a small resort near Mercer, Wis., the gang and his followers, left the area.

$15,000 SUIT RESULTS FROM DOWDEN DEATH

Negligence, Recklessness Charged Against Robert C. Peters.

NAME FATHER, TOO

Claim Dowden On Proper Side Of Road.

Charging Robert C. Peters, N. Court-st, with negligent, reckless, and dangerous operation of his automobile, Durward Dowden, administrator of the estate of the late Russell D. Dowden, has filed suit in common pleas court for $15,000 damages against Peters and his father, Robert C. Peters.

The petition, prepared by Charles Dresbach and Ray W. Davis, claims the action is for the benefit of Russell Dowden's widow, Mrs. Emily Dowden, 26, and their three-year-old daughter.

Dowden was fatally injured when struck by the automobile driven by Peters on Dec. 23, 1933. The January grand jury investigated the death but did not return an indictment against Peters.

CHARGE CARELESSNESS

The administrator's petition recites that Russell Dowden was walking on the east, the proper side of the Island-rd, either within or near the city limits when Peters' automobile traveling toward Circleville, was Dowden, "suddenly and without any warning and operated by Robert C. Peters at a negligent, reckless, and dangerous rate of speed, between 25 and 30 miles an hour and not under control—struck and caused the death of Russell D. Dowden."

Six items in which Peters was at fault are alleged in the action. The petition further goes on to say that the automobile which figured in the tragedy was owned by Peters' father who has been informed his son was a "careless, heedless, reckless, and dangerous driver and that the car in his hands was a dangerous and deadly agency."

3 SERIOUSLY HURT IN GAS EXPLOSION

IRONTON, April 24.—Six persons, three of them children, were seriously burned today when a gas explosion completely wrecked a six-room cottage here.

One of the victims, Mrs. Ben Lynd, was believed probably fatally injured.

The other injured were Ben Lynd, husband of Mrs. Lynd; their three children, Jack, James and Junior, and Pearl DePree, a maid at the Lynd home. All of the victims were taken to the hospital.

Source of the explosion, which shook the surrounding blocks, was not exactly determined although it was believed that an open gas connection probably was responsible.

POM, OY, April 24.—Although his arm was torn off by the shoulder of a feed grinder on the farm of his father at Longbottom, near here yesterday, 10-year-old Don Pigott will recover, attaches at a Parkersburg hospital said today.

The father, Riley Pigott, was returning with some grain when he saw the boy move close to the grinder. The boy's coat sleeve caught in the machine, and he was twisted about pitilessly until the father could stop the motor.

The boy's arm was removed at the Parkersburg hospital.

TWO PER CENT TAX IN SENATE

Coshocton-co Senator Tosses Sales Measure Into Hopper

COLUMBUS, April 24.—A little disfigured but still in the ring, the administration's retail sales tax proposal bobbed up once more today, this time in the Ohio senate.

Five times has the house of representatives slaughtered this controversial tax measure, each time more unmercifully than on the previous occasion, yet it continues to flourish.

Sen. Will P. Haynes (D) Coshocton, administration leader, tossed the sales tax bill into the hopper of the senate, in which branch of the legislature it has never yet been voted on.

As sponsored by Haynes the sales tax rate is 2 per cent, or one per cent less than the original administration measure of this kind introduced in the lower house.

However, the house has defeated both 2 per cent and 3 per cent sales tax proposals decisively.

It is the foundation of the latest "permanent tax program" called to the attention of the senate, and Haynes estimated its annual yield at $28,000,000.

He also recommended increasing the excise tax on utilities 1.65 per cent to yield an additional $6,000,000, whereas the utilities excise bill passed by the lower house raised the tax only one per cent to bring in some $1,000,000.

Three existing taxes the Coshocton senator proposed to reenact. They were:

Liquid fuel tax—$10,000,000. Cigarette tax—$4,000,000. Intangibles tax—$5,200,000.

McAllister was given a 30-day stay of execution of sentence at the request of defense counsel and was permitted to go free under $1000 bond. The counsel asked the stay to perfect error proceeding seeking to upset the manslaughter verdict.

BANK PRESIDENT THWARTS ROBBERY

Raid on Illinois Bank Causes Arrest of One Gunman After Others Flee

ROUND LAKE, Ill., April 24.—A raid by five bandits on the First State Bank of Round Lake, Ill., was thwarted today by the bravery and quick action of Edwin C. Webber, bank president. One robber was wounded and captured.

Three of the men remained in the car while two went into the bank and began discussing a real estate deal with Webber.

The president's wife and his stenographer, Miss Viola Hart, also were present. As the bandits drew revolvers, Webber stepped behind the counter, touched an alarm button, grabbed his own revolver and began shooting.

Liquor Department Seeks To Close "Losing" Stores

COLUMBUS, April 24.—Pointing to total retail sales of only $395,607 in all state liquor stores up to last Friday night, J. H. Scobell, assistant liquor director, today reiterated the necessity for amending the liquor control act to permit the closing of unprofitable state stores, especially in dry counties.

Wholesale liquor business of the state monopoly for the same period amounted to $74,521, according to Scobell's figures. Wholesale purchasers get 15 per cent off the retail list price.

The assistant director pointed out that the many unprofitable liquor stores are lowering the average sales per store to a point reflecting unfairly against retail outlets in the larger cities doing a satisfactory business.

WOULD USE AGENT Under the present liquor control act it is mandatory upon the liquor department to set up a monopoly retail store in every county. An amendment now before the legislature and sponsored by the liquor department would make it optional with the department whether it established its own store or sold liquor through an agent engaged in some mercantile business, who would work on a straight salary basis.

Reports from retail stores contained in Scobell's figures and the "dave" business their reports covered included the following:

Mr. Glead, 15th only, $221; Mansville, 10th to 19th, $659; Gallipolis, 17th to 20th, $244; Pomeroy, 18th to 20th, $312; Athens, 19th only, $228; Lancaster, 19th only, $124.

Cincinnati—1109 Harrison, 13th to 20th, $4,426; 3512 Reading rd., 19th only, $110; 105 W. 6th St., (Continued on Page Two)

American Fascists Attack Big Religious Groups As Communistic.

WASHINGTON — While suspicious Congressmen have been looking under their beds for Dr. Wirt's Reds, an actual Fascist movement has been getting its roots firmly into American soil.

Most prominent of the many Fascist organizations is the Silver Shirts, strong in California, but with branches in various parts of the U. S. A. The recent attempt of Professor Moley to expose the Nazi movement in America actually served as a great boost for the Silver Shirts.

Moley's magazine article brought thousands of dollars in membership dues flowing to Silver Legion headquarters.

Chief of the Silver Shirts is William Dudley Pelley, a wartime Y. M. C. A. man who from his Washington headquarters sends out highly "confidential" warnings to American business men "for as low as $25 a year."

"The news censorship is tighter than you have the winter conception of," Chief Pelley warns, in describing the horrible conditions in the Nation's capital. "The United States is being swiftly and painlessly sovietized by Communistic cliques calling themselves Religious Groups. These are the Federal Council of Churches, the Central Council of American Rabbis, and the National Catholic Welfare Council."

Mark these three well, you American businessmen," Silver Shirts Pelley continues. "For if you fail to take note of what they are attempting it is going to effect you with more devastating results."

Chief Pelley then reveals the startling information that the revolutionary activity these "Communist-Religious Groups" are engaged in is none other than an attempt to persuade Congress to "increase income taxes."

New Deal Astor

His New York cronies are amazed at the chance that has come over Vincent Astor since he has come host to President Roosevelt on the Nourmahal. Astor, inheritor of the richest real estate in New York City, has become a paladin of the New Deal. He berates his clubmates for their extravagance and loudly defends the New Deal on all occasions.

At a recent dinner party he was seated next to Mrs. Harold Talbot, who had on three or four diamond bracelets. Astor took one look at them and protested loudly:

"Why, how can you wear those bracelets when men and women are starving?"

"I am wearing these bracelets, Mr. Astor, because my husband gave them to me. And I may add, that he makes his money himself. He had no grandfather to leave it to him."

Canned Meat

With many millions unemployed, with many thousands still undernourished, the United States Army has on its hands a large quantity of canned meat which it cannot give away, cannot sell, cannot use itself.

This is not because the meat is bad. On the contrary it is rated as above grade. The one difficulty is that the meat comes from Argentina. And an executive order has been issued prohibiting the Army, Navy or any relief agency from using foreign meat.

The order caught the Army with a large quantity of canned meat purchased in a hurry to feed the CCC. At that time there was virtually no meat in this country.

Some canning in Argentina. Since the Army cannot eat the meat, give it away or sell it, the only alternative is to keep it. Good canned meat will keep for about twenty years. General MacArthur figures by that time there will be another world war and the country will forget about foreign prejudice.

JUST, UNDER GIVEN FEDERAL MEN

WASHINGTON, April 24—"I hope we won't have to try him!" That's what the department of justice says about America's public enemy No. 1—John Dillinger.

In other words division of investigation agents have been instructed to shoot him first and ask questions, if necessary, later.

Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, in charge of criminal prosecutions, and J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation, expressed confidence that Dillinger soon would be captured.

"We got George (Machine Gun) Kelly — We'll get Dillinger just the same," Keenan declared.

SEARCH INTENSIFIED

The latest escapade of Dillinger, in which for the second time he shot himself out of the hands of the federal and state authorities, intensified the search.

Curiously enough, however, the fact that Dillinger killed a federal agent did not involve him more seriously with the government. It is no offense against federal law to kill a government agent, although the federal law provides punishment for the assault of a federal agent.

Virtually every attorney general since the war recommended to congress without success that the killing of a federal agent be made a violation of the United States law.

Justice Department officials were amazed at the ability of Dillinger to escape so frequently even though apparently surrounded. It was agreed that he knows he will be shot on sight.

No accurate record was maintained here as to the state offenses for which Dillinger is wanted. Several murders were involved. Dillinger is accused of bank robberies and numerous other crimes. The federal authorities have a charge of violation of the interstate motor vehicle theft act against him.

permitted Dillinger to be tried for murder soon as he is captured if taken alive since the penalty for that offense is more severe than for federal crime.

The hunt was widened over virtually all the middle western states today. Probably a thousand department of justice agents were on Dillinger's trail. Officials here predicted he would be captured within ten days but doubt was expressed whether he would be taken alive.

SYNOPSIS

After three years in Europe, lovely Stanley Paige, young society girl, returns to New York. She phones Perry Deverest, who had been madly in love with her before she was rushed abroad following her father's death. Stanley, however, was not so sure of her heart at the time. Perry realizes, after seeing Stanley again, that he is still in love with her but feels himself against committing himself until his love is reciprocated. Stanley, on her own as long as she could remember, was never sure of what she wanted in life. Perry takes her to Nigel Stern's studio party where she meets handsome Drew Armitage, "who has a way with women." Stanley is attracted to him immediately. He suggests that they get away from the crowd and go on the roof.

CHAPTER FOUR

She ran up the stairs and together they stepped out into the night. The sky was black and quite without stars. There was a little breeze and occasionally a brief spatter of raindrops. Drew, with an expansive gesture, made her a present of the sky and the wandering little breeze and the rooftops of Washington Square. "Not as nice as a penthouse bungalow but the best I can on such short notice. Would you care to smoke?"

Stanley nodded, glad of the cool air against her uplifted, flushed face. The sky seemed to swing very low. She felt suddenly that this was the most important moment she had ever known. That all sorts of things might happen—all sorts of things over which she had no control. She was no longer frightened. She was just terribly aware of the night and of herself and of this tall young man beside her.

He lighted two cigarettes at the same time and handed her one. They walked together to where the wall of the house rose a few feet above the roof, making a low parapet.

"Tell me about—you," he said, letting his arm brush her shoulder, not looking at her at all. "All I know about you is that I have never seen you before, that you have a boy's name and very, very disturbing eyes."

Stanley laughed. She was surprised to find she did it quite easily. She had thought perhaps she couldn't manage to be so casual, as though this was just like any time, anywhere.

"You've never seen me because I've been in Europe for three years and my father gave me his name and my mother was entirely to blame for my eyes. You see it's all very easily explained."

"You're so good at it," he told her evenly, "perhaps you can explain why we suddenly see each other for the first time and are—as we are, feel as we do."

"I don't know what you mean," Stanley stared straight ahead, her chin once more lifted defensively, her voice steady with a fierce steadiness.

"Oh, yes, you do. You know exactly what I mean. It's what made your hand shake so when I touched it—it's what made you leave the party and come up here with me—why, you're trembling right now—you poor little devil!"

He flung his cigarette away, put his arms about her, tipped her head back against his shoulder.

"Like to be kissed?" he asked her softly, bringing his mouth close to her parted lips.

"Not—promiscuously." She wanted to close her eyes. She forced herself not to. She must keep them open. Laugh at him with them—now that her lips refused to do so.

"Meaning what?"

"Meaning that I don't know you."

"Then—you don't want me to kiss you?"

"No." It was a mere whisper of words.

He let her go immediately. Reached for another cigarette.

"Very well. You do, you know, but if you'd rather we'll pretend you don't—though why you should want to pretend that—"

She turned back to him, clenching angry hands. She was trembling with desire and choked with frustration. "I suppose you can't understand a girl not allowing you to kiss her—"

"You're quite wrong," he contradicted her quietly. "What I can't understand is a girl not allowing me to kiss her when she wants to be kissed as badly as you want to be."

"I'd like to go back to the party."

She walked rapidly away from him, toward the hatchway. The sky seemed to come down very close. A spatter of rain struck her hair and lay like tears on her face. She had quite reached the opening before she realized that he was not following her. That he was standing where she had left him, the tip of his cigarette glowing brightly in the thick darkness.

"Come back here," he said slowly.

She did not turn. Neither did she go on.

"Come back here," he repeated gently.

"No."

"Yes."

She turned and stared at him. On her shoulder, Perry's gardenias trembled in the little breeze. But Perry no longer existed. She went toward him slowly. Inevitably. As if she had known all the time that in the end she would go. That in the end it would be like this.

Stanley was very quiet as Perry drove her home through deserted streets. She sat slumped beside him, her chin buried in the deep fur of her coat.

"Tired, Stan?"

"Yes—no, that is, I don't know, Perry."

Perry stared straight ahead, his hands quiet on the wheel. He had been drinking quite a bit and when he spoke again his voice was rough.

"What happened between you and Armitage tonight?"

Perry shrugged. "You know what I mean—did he make love to you and did you like it?"

Stanley answered him at once, and a bit defiantly. "I don't have to answer that question, Perry, but I will. He did make love to me and I did like it."

"I'm sorry, darling," he said as the deuce. "Perry's voice was suddenly contrite. A minute later he said, 'Are you in love with him, Stan?'"

Stanley considered a moment. Not his question but her answer.

Progress In The War On Pneumonia

Oxygen, Serums Aid Science in Fight On This Disease

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

MANY OF you will be surprised to learn that only recently has the treatment of pneumonia progressed to any satisfactory point. What has been done in this direction is one of the accomplishments of modern medical science. As a matter of fact, there still remains room for improvement in the methods used.

Few realize how really serious this disease can be. Indeed it has always been a real menace to mankind. Pneumonia afflicts young and old, rich and poor alike. It is found in all parts of the world and strikes with lightning like rapidity.

We never know when this serious disease may strike. Some scientists claim that the germs of pneumonia are always with each of us. But they attack only when the resistance of the body is low and unable to successfully battle the infection.

During the World War, pneumonia was a common ailment. It proved, as fatal as bullets from the enemy's guns. In one of its forms it was frequently a complication of the ordinary cold, grippé and "flu." It followed gassing and infected wounds. Exposure to cold and dampness, lack of food, fatigue and nervous strain, constructed in trench life, quickly led to serious and often fatal cases of pneumonia. Of course, under similar conditions in civilian life, the menace of pneumonia cannot be disregarded.

Fortunately, medical science has perfected two new methods of dealing with pneumonia. I refer to the administration of oxygen and the use of pneumonic serum. It is true that oxygen has been successfully used for many years. But it is only recently that certain improvements have increased its value.

Today, the victim of pneumonia is placed in an oxygen tent. This covers the patient's upper body and enables him to breathe rarified air or a concentrated atmosphere of oxygen. In large hospitals, special rooms are constructed in which the air of the room contains a certain amount of pure oxygen.

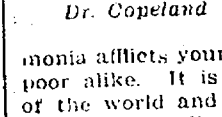

The beneficial effects of this treatment are amazing. The patient becomes comfortable, quickly losing the restlessness so characteristic of pneumonia. He breathes easily and with less strain on the heart. The fever gradually comes down and within a short time he improves in every way.

"Rockefeller Serum"

Within recent years, great advances have been made in the serum treatment of pneumonia. Unfortunately, the serum is not always available and, in many types of pneumonia, it is of no value. For example, the so-called "Rockefeller serum" and "Fulton serum" can be used only in certain types of pneumonia.

Scientists are now engaged in perfecting a serum which may be used in any case of pneumonia. It is pleasing to know that advancement has been made in the treatment of a disease heretofore accepted as extremely fatal.

Of course, I do not mean to imply that pneumonia is or ever will be a minor ailment. It is always serious and requires expert medical attention and careful nursing.

Progress In The War On STARSAY

MUSICAL TALENT AND THE MONDOSCOPE
By R. FREDERIC KANE

Whether or not to spend money for a child's education in music is one of the problems the ambitious parent has to contend with. Much money is absolutely wasted in trying to teach certain persons music. There are several ways to ascertain the degree of musical ability possessed and astrology is one of them.

A recent check-up of the past and living musicians both performers and composers, showed that the majority were born when the Moon was in the sign Gemini. Venus in Taurus or Cancer, Mercury in Sagittarius or Capricorn, the Sun in Cancer, Capricorn or Aquarius and Jupiter in Aries. It would be impossible to give all the dates when the Moon, Venus and Mercury were in the above mentioned signs but the position of Jupiter in Aries can be given here. Jupiter was in Aries from June 1927 until the latter part of September of the same year and from February 1928 until June of the same year.

Great love for music does not signify the ability to learn or to perform it. Almost all those born when the Sun was in the sign Libra are great lovers of the fine arts but we do not find them performing. The same holds good in the case of those born when the Moon or the Moon was in the sign Pisces. A good Gemini influence is necessary to good performance. The Moon in Gemini in good aspect to Venus would be a good sign of ability to learn and perform music. Even the bad aspects to the Moon in Gemini do not seem to hinder. They seem to impel the person toward perfection. The square aspect to Venus also seems to have the same affect. All these things are of course a little too technical for most of you but if you want to save yourself much worry and money it might be best that you consult a real astrologer before making definite arrangements for your child's musical education. However, do not be misled by the type of "astrology" which claims that all born in the same Sun sign are, alike, in all things. Get a real horoscope cast and you will never regret the extra money spent.

MISTAKES WE MAKE

How prone we are to misconstrue
And thereby great injustice do
To those we hardly know;
We pass our judgment harsh or kind
As tho' we had a right to find
The faults which others show.

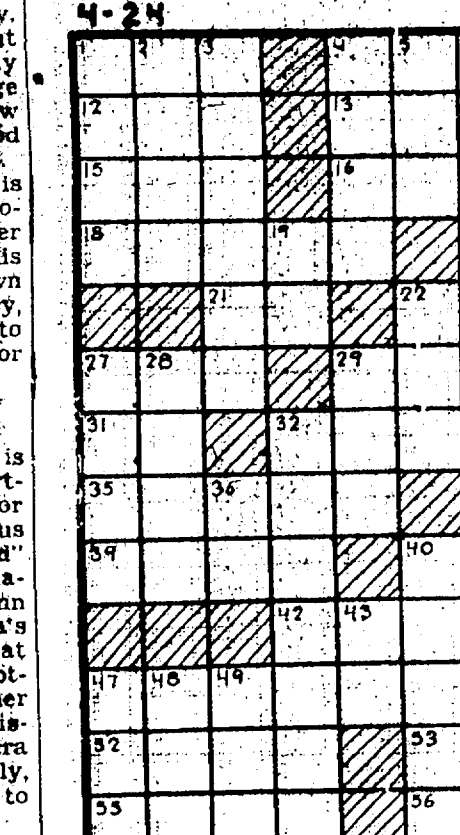

Beneath the clothes we think we see
The good or bad which there may be;
We are so doubly sure
That we could never a mistake
With vision clear then ever make
Or render judgment poor.

Affirm we do that one is bad
And in our estimate seem glad;
Our voice belies our heart, say
Another is quite good; say
For we have watched him day by day
From prejudice apart.

But what mistakes we daily make
As we our inventories take
And cover folks with shame;
Sure, only one can clearly see
The virtues and the faults in me,
But he is slow to blame.

A FELLOW TO BEAT AT A DEAD-ADVANTAGE STRATEGY WITH A JUDGE, because the judge is a judge and can look down on the poor prisoner. And most people get so scared they don't know what they're saying to a judge, say now.

"You're charged with stealing a dozen watches and two emeralds from a jewelry store. How do you plead?"

"I ain't guilty, Judge. Honest I ain't guilty."

"Have you got a lawyer?"

"No."

"Can you afford to hire a lawyer?"

"I suppose he'd get me off if I gave him the two emeralds?"

dependent plans to take the stamp to discuss the New Deal. Every section of the country will hear him.

Borah is not running for anything. His senatorial term still has three years to go. Sixty-nine years old, he long since has laid aside all Presidential aspirations.

Borah simply plans to revive the Old American town-meeting custom of discussing publicly public issues. As a liberal, Borah finds much in the Roosevelt Administration he approves and supports.

But as an old-fashioned, uncompromising Constitutionalist, the egg-head warrior is deeply alarmed over certain tendencies to do away with the traditional American political system of checks and balances, and to substitute centralization of authority in individuals.

Borah also is strongly of the opinion that certain New Deal innovations, the NRA particularly, are fostering monopolies, annihilating the "little fellow."

All these views he plans to air, not for the purpose of attacking the Administration, but to bestir an alert public discussion. He has already received many invitations to speak, plans to map out an itinerary as soon as Congress adjourns then launch his campaign.

Truculent Senator Carter Glass owns two daily newspapers in Lynchburg, Va., his home town, but he keeps strict hands-off on their editorial policy. He says he enjoins but one standing order: "They shall never say anything abusive or commendatory about me." President Roosevelt's free give-and-take press conferences are still as popular as ever. In fact the number of press representatives attending seems to grow. Usually, after a few months of a new Administration, attendance falls off. The President's press meetings, however, have grown to such an extent that not infrequently there is hardly standing room in the executive office. Dr. Robert Bruere, one of the six guests at the now famous Virginia country-house dinner, where "Doc" Wirt uncovered the Brain Trust reformatory plot, was the most outraged. The senior class will present a play, "A Wood Violet" on the evening of May 2 at 8:00 o'clock. The play has a cast of 16 players, which includes all the members of the class but one.

The play centers about the courting of a young mountain girl, the "Wood Violet" by a city lover. Incidents in the play include a misunderstanding between Violet and her city lover, Milton Ramsdale; a train wreck and all the attendant horrors. Jim Martin, a country lad, almost marries Violet when she hears that Hilroy is engaged to a city girl, Jean Swathmore.

Come and see how the play ends. The seventeen seniors who are expecting to graduate this year are: Girls, Margorie Shure, Cora Kerns, Ora Kerns, Marie Poling, Irene Kelley, Edith Jones, Dorothy Hedges, and Leona Spangler. Boys: Ralph Aldenderge, Lenwood Bushee, Frank Dawson, Eugene Gildersleeve, Gerald Hall, David Kuh, Sterling Poling, Merile Hartraft and Clarence Maxson.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS SETH PARKER PROGRAM

A crowded auditorium enjoyed the presentation of "Seth Parker and His Neighbors" at the Methodist Episcopal church Monday evening. The entertainment was sponsored by the Zelda Guild.

The story takes place in the parlor of the home of Seth and Mother Parker, portrayed by John Howard and Mrs. Carl Bennett. Mr. Howard, a professional actor who is only 24 years old, did the part of Seth Parker in almost perfect style. He appeared to be 85 instead of 24. Mrs. Bennett, who officiated at the organ, gave him splendid support.

Other features of the show were John Hegele as Captain Bann, Ross Henry as Cephus, a dumb boy, whose actions kept the audience in a continued uproar; his collection act proved a highlight. Wendell Boyer and Mrs. Delos Marcy as John and Jane, sweethearts, also had an important part in the success of the presentation. H. W. Plum's "O'Den Golden Slippers" received much applause.

Others who had parts were Mrs. Edwin Bach as Lizzie Peters, the chatterbox spinster; Mrs. Frank Kline, Jr., as Mollie a friend and neighbor; Glen Galt, as Lem, a friend; Mrs. J. Wray Henry as Sister Davis; Miss Doris Moffitt as Mary; S. B. Chambers as Dr. Tanner; Mrs. Aubrey Lemley, Mrs. Thaddeus Cromley and Dick Plum as neighbors.

The "ancient" costumes worn by all members of the cast helped add a touch of "neighborliness."

Power of a Smile

An excellent remedy for "the blues" and preventive of dumpyishness will be found in this suggestion. "Keep the corners of your mouth turned up," in other words, keep a smile upon your lips, even when you are alone. "Try it. It acts like a charm. It keeps one in good spirits, and it drives the frown from other faces, too. It gets like sun shine. It warms and brightens all it falls upon. A smile will suppress the angry retort that is dancing on the quivering lips. Smiling faces make a peaceful, happy home."—Anonymous.
